Vincit CEO Julius Manni

The first quarter of 2024 was in line with our expectations in a still challenging environment. The year-on-year decrease in revenue reflects the market downturn in the custom software development business and the planned reduction in Vincit's headcount, which was due to the decline in demand for custom software development services. At the same time, Vincit's strategic transformation journey is moving in the right direction as we seek to apply our expertise more deeper into our customers' business-critical operations. To support this, we are currently recruiting across a broad front for more than 40 open specialist positions.

In the Nordics, our digital commerce-focused business continues to grow, and the foundation for growth and demand for the SAP S/4HANA business is solid. To strengthen our strategic position, we created a new business unit focused on data, analytics and Al. Profitability trend in the Nordic countries improved compared to the second half of last year and we will only take on projects where long-term price levels are sustainable. We will continue to focus on business-driven solution selling and end-to-end project deliveries.

In the US, we continued our disciplined approach to customer acquisition with a sharpened customer offering and announced significant customer contract renewals during the period. Our billing rates in the US are still low, but as new projects materialize, our profitability can quickly turn positive. We still see great potential for Vincit in the US market.

Vincit is now at a turning point in many areas of its business. However, it takes time for our change to have an impact on earnings, and sales cycles for larger projects are currently significantly longer due to the uncertainty caused by the general economic situation.

Alternative performance measures

The company presents alternative performance measures EBITDA and EBITA to better describe the financial development of its business. In addition, EBITA is applied as the profitability indicator in its 2024 financial guidance. EBITA replaces the Adjusted EBIT (EBIT before goodwill amortization) previously used by the company, and it is calculated by adding amortization and impairment to operating profit. The presentation of segment revenue has changed, and it no longer includes internal revenue between segments. Quarterly comparable segment figures can be found in the tables below.
